2. Citations and explanations (Rule 70.7)

The claimed invention relates to a method for realizing a voice message in a simple and economic manner. A voice message for the subscriber, who was not reached, is transmitted as a multimedia message.

Documents cited in the International Search Report:

D1: WO 0135622 A1
D2: EP 1113631 A2
D3: US 2001053687 A1
D4: JP 2002335299 PAJ
D5: EP 1255416 A1
D6: WO 0030374 A2
D7: WO 0133781 A1

D2 reveals a request for establishing a connection, (fig.7a). As a response to a failed attempt (703) for establishing a connection, a messaging service is automatically started (706). A voice message may be created and recorded as a sound clip of a multimedia message and transmitted to the receiver, (paragraphs 0110-0111 and 0128).

The message may contain text, pictures or video, (fig.7b; 711). The multimedia message may be automatically transmitted to the receiver, (fig.7b; 713, 714).

D4 relates to a communication system for multimedia information that can retransmit even on the occurrence of transmission interruption due to channel trouble or the like. D5 discloses a method for storing and accessing multimedia messaging service information, while D6 reveals a method for forming and communicating among a group of mobile terminals. D7 deals with a method for implementing a multimedia messaging service. .../...

Supplemental Box

In case the space in any of the preceding boxes is not sufficient.

Continuation of: BOX V

D1, D3 and D4 do not disclose a failed attempt for establishing a connection to another subscriber.

The claimed invention differs from the cited documents by the fact that the multimedia messaging service (MMS) application is started and a recording function of a sound clip is activated in the calling device automatically as a response to a failed attempt for establishing a connection. The multimedia response message is stored in a volatile random access memory of the device in question.

Thus, the claimed invention fulfils the requirements of novelty, inventive step and industrial applicability.
